Royal Guide to St. Louis and the World's Fair, 1904.—In submitting the "Royal Guide" to St. Louis and the World's Fair, the publishers believe they are conferring a favor upon the public generally. There is a vast amount of information given in the "Royal Guide" that is found in no other publicain the "Royal Guide" that is found in no other publication. The principal merits of the work are accuracy, comprehensiveness and compactness. The publishers have spared neither time nor expense in the compilation of the work, and we know that we have a great number of new features of interest to the public, that have never before been published, concerning St.
Louis and the World's Greatest Fair. It gives the names, dimensions and cost of the many imposing palaces erected by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company; and also the appropriations of the different States of the Union with a cescription of the buildings and exhibit from each State respectively. A description is also given of the beautiful pavilions and exhibits belonging to the different nations of the earth, who are making envious displays from every part of the world, to center here at the World's Fair. Much other information will be given that our space here cannot cover. The manufecturers and patriotic citizens are giving their aid to make this little book as second to none, in giving to the world at large, as true a descripnone, in giving to the world at large, as true a description of the City and World's Fair greatness as possibly can be given in so small a publication, being in size 3½ x 5¾ inches with 100 pages of tine book, with heavy colored paper cover. In addition to all the foregoing, there will also be about 18 pages of condensed items from all parts of the world, concerning its exhibits at the World's Fair and surroundings during the seven months of its existence, from April 30 to Novembr 30, 1904, together with assignment of special days for the various organizations and for different States, by World's Fair Committee on Ceremonies. Also a complete Directory and map of the Great City of St. Louis, World's Fair Committee on Ceremonies. Also a complete Directory and map of the Great City of St. Louis, its hotels, street car lines, names of all streets, etc. It is really indispensable if you contemplate a trip to the Fair.
